Tschaikowsky's "Manfred" Mme. Tamaki Miura Says Miss Symphony Is Edited to Agree With Byron.

PERCY GRAINGER PLAYS FOR WOMAN SUFFRAGE

The Symphony Society gave the first of its series of separate Sunday aftermoon concerts yesterday at Aeolian Hall.

Waiter Damrosch, the conductor, offered a programme of music by Tschaikowsky. Percy Grainger, the young Australian composer-pianist, who appeared here so frequently last season, was the solo player.

The symphony "Manfred" was first played. This piece of programme music, which is mainly busied with a delineation of incidents in Byron's poem, is an interesting work. First of all it affords change from those of the Russian master's other symphonies so frequently performed in local concert halls. A note in the house programme stated that in the house programme stated that in the house programme stated that in the opinion of Mr. Damrosch the symphony does not gain by the first part of the fourth movement, which is entitled "Bacchanal in the Palace of Aribanas," and as the poem of By. on also contains no reference to such a scene he should consider it best to omit this part. Otherwise the work was played as written.

The orchestra's performance of it was highly creditable.

Of course questions will arise as to Mr. Damrosch's authority to edit the compositions which he conducts, but this conductor has been known even to make improvements on Beethoven. Just how far the series of this general contents of the art of singing and the art of music.

Mr. Grainger was heard in the B flat concerto for planoforte with orchestra. His performance of the work was wholly interesting. It was one distinctive in an art guided by finer shades of a poetical temperament combined with admirable dramatic power. The supply of delicacies brought to this country from Europe has so far been affected chiefly as to the sardines and similar kinds of preserved fish. One firm which made a specialty of a certain mackerel in oils has entirely ceased to receive any of these from France and has, moreover, notified customers that they must indefinitely decline to fill any more orders. It is the same to a less degree with sardines, of which certain brands are no longer to be had.

One of the interesting features of the trustees' meeting was the report of Mr. Innes and the Rev. Dr. Watson, who were sent to Egypt to confer with Gov-ernment officials there. They reported that Sir Henry McMahon, High Commissioner, and Lord Edward Cecil, Minister of Finance, had welcomed the idea of the establishment of an American uni-versity at Cairo, which is the intellec-tual centre of the Moslem world. Several trustees asked if there was a possibility that Egypt might fall into Turkish or German hands. Mr. Innes and Dr. Watson expressed the belief that such a possibility was so remote that it should in no way interfere with the plans to build the university.

The trustees intend to purchase about 200 acres of land close to Cairo. This will cost between $150,000 and $200,000.
